Start with safety and one practical step

When things feel urgent, choose one clear step instead of trying to solve everything at once.

- Check safety first: immediate danger belongs with emergency help.
- Choose one calm next step you can do today.
- Write down only what you need for planning and follow-up.
- Use counseling, school/provider support, 211, legal aid, or official forms when more help is needed.

Keep personal details private

Use these pages for your own planning. Share sensitive details only with trusted helpers, qualified professionals, official agencies, legal counsel, or emergency/crisis support when needed.

- Do not put child names, medical records, sealed records, confidential court materials, or private allegations into broad emails, social media, or untrusted forms.
- Store sensitive documents somewhere safe.
- Ask a qualified professional or official office when safety, health, legal process, or deadlines are involved.
- Use general review notes only for wording, policy, process, safety, clarity, and implementation suggestions.
